It is easy to use because it has a simple set of interface tools and the program assumes that you know the basics of working with raster images. It is effective for retouching, although like many other programs, it is not capable of doing anything in the realm of compositing or animation. This program is actually a set of multiple applications that work in conjunction with each other to help you retouch images. It's essentially a Photoshop plug-in. *

www.adobe.com/products/photoshop/extensions/ Photoshop Plug-in Information It's worth noting that not all plug-ins are created equal. Not all are compatible with Photoshop CS5 or CS6, or even Photoshop CS3. The ones that are compatible with Photoshop use a complicated version numbering structure. For example, a plug-in that supports Photoshop CS5 uses a version number of 1.0.5 in the file name. Other plug-ins that work with Photoshop CS5.5 don't support Photoshop CS5 at all. As a general rule, plug-ins were originally designed to be placed in layers to work with Photoshop. Over time, the developers of these plug-ins realized that it might be helpful to have access to the raster layers directly. The original plug-in that supports Photoshop CS6 does this by default. However, you can still use plug-ins that work with older versions of Photoshop by using the layer's comment system to keep the settings as they were when the plug-in was first installed. You can open a file created in an older version of Photoshop and apply a plug-in to it by first opening the file in the current version and switching to the layer that contains the plug-in. In this manner, you can use a plug-in created for Photoshop CS3.5 while working with Photoshop CS3.5 files. This method also enables you to use plug-ins that were created for older versions of Photoshop. The same file can be opened in multiple versions of Photoshop, but setting the plug-in's options correctly can be a different process for each version of Photoshop.

Badstueck 1 = Blatt 1 Badstueck 1 = Blatt 1 (German for "supplement 1 = issue 1") was a German language legal newspaper published in Berlin between March 8, 1919, and November 1, 1924. As a law journal the newspaper reported on the activities of the Prussian Provisional Government, the first Republic of Germany's (Imperial) Constitution, the German parliament (Reichstag) and the legal reforms enacted by the government of Fritz Scharlach. The subtitle was also used for a number of other occasional publications from the 1920s on. It was founded by lawyers Lohmeyer, Segelschott and Stürmer and designed in the form of a newspaper supplement (Stück 1). The legal journal was published by publishers Roland Henze and Karl Löbner. Background After the end of World War I, the German Empire was replaced by the German Republic and Otto Braun became the President of Germany. The German War led to major political changes and Otto Braun and many of his political allies left the country. On March 5, 1919, Otto Braun and the first minister of the Prussian Provisional Government, Friedrich Ebert negotiated and signed the Treaty of Versailles. Otto Braun and the other political parties in Germany soon realized that they needed a new constitution to provide a legal basis for the new state. They set up an assembly in Berlin on March 7, 1919, to write a new constitution. The article 77 of the German Constitution needed to be changed. The article 77 allowed the president to appoint the ministers without legislative approval. The German Constitutional Court had to rule on the questions whether the existing law was constitutional or unconstitutional. The result of the ruling of the German Constitutional Court created confusion in Germany and Otto Braun and the other parties realized that they needed a simple legislative text to govern the German state. On April 26, 1919, the first session of the German parliament took place. Otto Braun and the other political parties realized that they needed a quick publication of an official newspaper to report on the activities of the parliament. Roland Henze the publisher was told that his newspaper Berliner Tageblatt (newspaper Berlin Times) could be re-named Badstück 1 = Blatt 1.
