Note The earliest versions of Photoshop had been designed for creating art, but in later versions it began to be used for other purposes. If you run Photoshop 7 or earlier, you'll probably find it hard to appreciate the program's many special effects. You can start any document in Photoshop by choosing File⇒New. In the New dialog box, click the thumbnail in the lower-right corner to load a preview of the next image you're about to create. The New dialog box has the following options: * Background color. You use this option to control the color of the background of the new document. If you select a color, the background is filled with it. Use the box below it to choose a color from the Color Picker, or click the Foreground Color button and choose a color from the Color Picker. * Document Type. This option defines the type of document that you create. You can create a _normal_ document, which saves the file, has no effects applied to it, and saves it as a PDF file, for example. You can also create a _preview_ document, which has no effects and previews the image, or a _photocopy_ document, which copies an image directly from a source document. Most new images are created as normal documents. * Batch processing. Choosing this option enables you to _batch_ processes, a fancy way of saying "Run the same task over several selected images." For example, you may paste a watermark in the same place on several images. (You need to be careful of the order in which you paste different elements—if you do it in the wrong order, the most recently pasted image may end up looking like the most recently pasted image.)

Q: React Native Firebase Database Query Child Data I am having trouble figuring out how to properly query the Firebase database, in order to fetch all children with a certain "name" attribute and display those children in the render method. I understand that the code is very inefficient, but I was unable to find an alternative. I tried playing around with ref={this.ref}, but it did not show up. Code: import React, {Component} from'react'; import {Text, View} from'react-native'; export default class App extends Component { constructor() { super(); this.state = { list: [], items: [] } this.currentUser = firebase.auth().currentUser; this.ref = firebase.database().ref('items'); } _addItem = () => { this.ref.push({ name: this.currentUser.uid, description: 'This is a test' }) } _removeItem = (id) => { this.ref.child(id).remove(); } _updateItem = (item) => { this.ref.child(item.id).update({ name: item.name, description: item.description }); } _removeUser = () => { this.ref.remove(); } componentDidMount() { this.ref.on('value', (snapshot) => { const items = snapshot.val() || []; this.setState({ items }); }); } render() { return (

The Voices in My Head I have to remember to be suspicious of the things that I hear. The other day I was listening to a podcast when I heard about a guy who was talking about working out and getting into great shape. My brain immediately took over and started telling me how frustrated I was with my weight. And it wasn't long before my mind was full of all the awful things I had to say to this guy. The internal monologue of a negative thought process. I found myself agreeing with everything I was telling myself. It wasn't until I thought about it that I realized I couldn't think like that and I had to just stop. I just had to sit and listen. It's hard to do in this age of distractions, social media, and technology. It's hard to keep down thoughts of negativity and doubt. This doesn't mean we always have to listen to those thoughts, but we do need to listen, and we need to pay attention to them. They are trying to get a foothold in our minds. They need to be stopped. There are different ways to do this. One way is to sing to them; I found that my voice of reason was a good voice to sing to these thoughts. Usually it took a while for me to figure out what lyrics and music I should sing but the important thing is that I listened to them. By the time I was through singing I didn't even remember them. There are many ways to pay attention to the thoughts that we're having; there are ways to use the voice of reason. Another way is to remind ourselves that our thoughts can be wrong. We should remember that. We should try to believe that it's not always true. Another way to not listen to our thoughts is to ask questions and let the answers in. For example, I was thinking about getting into a great shape and I thought: "I'm such a failure. I can't even make myself take care of myself. I have a big job in two weeks and I haven't even started working out. I would never have gotten up on the stage at my job were I in better shape. How am I going to do this. I just don't think I have what it takes" Then I asked myself: "How am I supposed to get into great shape?
